Katz not sold on ticket tax: Letter to mayor

- City councillors received copy of letter last week
- Arena negotiations to be discussed by council Wednesday

do if a ticket tax isn't used to fund $125 million of a new arena downtown.

"From my point of view, the ticket surcharge is a fundamental component of the funding model," said Coun. Amarjeet Sohi.

In a letter obtained by Corus Radio News, and later confirmed by Sohi, Oilers owner Daryl Katz wrote to Mayor Stephen Mandel that he has "not agreed" to a ticket tax and that "there remain significant unresolved issues in the negotiations between my representatives and the city administration."

"I'll be interested to see whether Mr. Katz has anything new to propose in terms of revenue source," said Coun. Don Iveson, adding if Katz thinks a larger CRL than what was outlined by the city is the answer, there "might be an impasse."

There is currently a seven per cent tax at Rexall Place. City CFO Lorna Rosen said last Thursday that would be bumped up two or three percentage points at the new arena.

The ticket tax — along with $125 million from the CRL and Katz's promised $100 million — would leave only $100 million of the $450-million project to be funded.

Body may be of missing city man

Rocky Mountain House RCMP is awaiting results of an autopsy scheduled for today to determine if a body found near Nordegg could be that of a missing Edmonton man.

Brian Scheffelmaier, 52, went missing from Nordegg Lodge early last week. His vehicle was found in the mountainous area last Friday.

The body was discovered by a joint team of RCMP air and police-dog services, Alberta Sustainable Resource Development and search and rescue.

Josh Ostafichuk went onto Wipeout Canada hoping to grab the course by the balls.

"It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience," said the 27-year-old, one of 61 from Alberta chosen for the Canuck incarnation of the game now played out on TV in 30 countries.

He is one of several Edmontonians navigating Wipeout's comical course of big balls, water obstacles and sucker punches as much for bragging rights as for cash.

"For me to get to go through an obstacle course, the $50,000 would be just a bonus," said Ostafichuk of the "hilarious" TV game show, which debuted last night.

"I am short, so I couldn't reach a lot ... and I got flung around," said the bartender, noting she came away with bruises and a skinned knee, but also timeless friendships.

Liberals' style stands out at platform launch

Michael Ignatieff speaks without notes to emphasize authenticity ◐ Platform elements focus on family

Election 2011

Never mind the substance, check out the style.

The Liberal campaign platform launch yesterday wasn't just an opportunity for the party to tout its "family pack" policy agenda paid for by billions in business tax hikes.

The online launch of the 94-page document was designed as a study in contrasts between Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff and Prime Minister Stephen Harper as Canadian voters consider their ballot choices for May 2.

"This is what democracy looks like," said Ignatieff, speaking without notes or TelePrompTer in a hotel ballroom ringed with seated supporters like an amphitheatre.

"This is the right way to do it, folks. This is the only way to do it in a democracy. You put ideas out, you defend them clearly, and then you stand and answer questions in front of the Canadian people."

The launch format included video addresses from Liberal candidates — all women — heralding four family-friendly platform elements: Pension reforms, post-secondary education, home care and early-childhood education.

"The other guys are a one-man band," Ignatieff said of Harper. "I've got a team."

Red Book launch

The detailed Liberal platform release comes unusually early in the 36-day campaign.

- It mirrors the Liberal launch of their 1993 campaign Red Book, which was also delivered in a budget-style media lockup at a downtown Ottawa hotel — designed to lend an air of credibility to a policy blueprint.
- This time the document also went out online, something Ignatieff said made "a little bit of history."

▶ Prime Minister Stephen Harper plays ball hockey with a group of youngsters in Ottawa yesterday.

Harper rocks out to AC/DC with karate kids

Stephen Harper started the second week of his federal election campaign in his personal comfort zone: Listening to some AC/DC and playing a little hockey.

He stayed in his policy comfort zone as well.

Harper announced that, if elected, the Tories would double the existing tax credit for children's sports to $1,000 and introduce a $500 credit for adults.

But neither will come into force until the budget is balanced — or not until 2015-16, according to Tory estimates.

"A re-elected Conservative government will enact both of these measures before the end of our next mandate, because our approach is clear — when we can afford it, we will lower your taxes," Harper told a campaign event yesterday at an Ottawa gym.

Initially, Conservative officials had said the children's tax credit would go into effect immediately, but they later changed their tune, citing an error in the campaign literature.

An expert panel will decide which activities qualify for the credit, Harper said as a group of young, aspiring martial artists kicked and punched the air behind him.

The kids' program is slated to cost the treasury about $145 million a year, while the adult program carries an annual price tag of $275 million.

Harper arrived at the gym to the sounds of Thunderstruck by AC/DC, a band he counts among his favourites.

He and his wife, Laureen, spent some time watching children practise karate moves before each picked up a red padded shield to give the kids a livelier target.

Said Harper to one waifish child as he absorbed the blows: "Put more into it."

NDP pans Red Books

Jack Layton brushed off the Liberal platform release yesterday as the NDP campaign continued trying to find its footing.

Without having read the Liberal program, Layton dismissed it as hollow, suggesting the promises in the party's Red Books over the years "were broken in record numbers."

It was left to one of Layton's unelected candidates, Francoise Boivin — a former Liberal in Gatineau-Hull — and Layton's wife, Toronto NDP incumbent Olivia Chow, to dissect the platform in detail.

It was a curious strategy, given that the NDP are battling Liberals for much of the same electoral turf, and that Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff appeared to make gains at Layton's expense during the first week of the May 2 campaign.

"We believe in running uphill. That's our party. We run uphill."
NDP LEADER JACK LAYTON

Chow defended her husband's absence.

"Jack Layton did address the platform," she insisted.

Markets, dollar grind forward

Analysts expect Canadian job gains of up to 30,000 last month Unemployment figures projected to dip

Stock markets look set to extend gains this week after signs that the U.S. economic recovery is gaining momentum.

Investors pushed aside concerns about fighting in Libya and the aftermath of the Japanese earthquake to push stocks higher last week on what was perceived to be strengthening economic fundamentals.

The U.S. labour department reported Friday that the economy created 216,000 jobs last month, which was above expectations. The jobless rate edged down one-tenth of a percentage point to a two-year low of 8.8 per cent.

The Institute for Supply Management's index, also a key barometer of U.S. manufacturing, came in slightly better than expected for March.

The U.S. numbers sent the resource-heavy Toronto stock exchange up five per cent for the first quarter.

"Given the many hurdles that were thrown in the market's path in the opening three months, I think the performance of equity markets was nothing short of miraculous," said Doug Porter, deputy chief economist at BMO Capital Markets.

But Porter was concerned about oil prices, which, if they stay at the $107 US mark, could throw the global economy and U.S. economic recovery off track.

Meanwhile, the Canadian dollar could rise further at the end of the week when traders see the latest employment report.

Porter said it's expected that Statistics Canada will report another month of strong gains.

Tax deal is bitter tweet

A proposed tax break for one of the world's hottest social-media companies has sparked a storm of twittering in San Francisco. As an incentive for moving its headquarters to a blighted inner-city block, Twitter has asked to be released from San Francisco's payroll tax on new hires. This could mean big savings as the company expands from hundreds to thousands of employees. But politicians and unionists have condemned the proposal as a gift to the rich. And low-income residents worry that revitalization will just lead to higher rents. Twitter declined to comment on the fracas.

REAL VERSUS IMAGINARY ARENA MONEY

Are you as thoroughly confused about how the proposed downtown arena will be financed? It would appear to me that there is real money and imaginary money that is going to pay for it.

I am assuming here that Daryl Katz is talking about real dollars, though his $100-million contribution seems to come and go depending upon which way the wind is blowing. The city, however, seems eager to pony up imaginary dollars. I say imaginary because, as I understand it, those dollars do not currently exist in any current revenue stream.

Instead, $125 million is to come from a community revitalization levy (CRL). But, as one councillor noted, CRLs are not guaranteed revenue.

Those dollars may or may not appear. At this point, there would appear to be no contingency plan if revenues from the CRL fall short of what the city commits to.

The city has limited resources with which to replace lost revenue.

One of the most common ways of doing so is to reach further into the pockets of taxpayers. I don't much like the idea of that.

Given the other financial fiascos created by the city such as the Indy and the Capitol Theatre project for Fort Edmonton Park, it is the idea of cost overruns that has me trembling.

So far I have heard nothing about what would happen if some unforeseen event or circumstance causes the costs of the arena project to skyrocket.

Who would be on the hook for the increase? Katz? The city?

You and me?

Somehow I suspect one way or another that you and I would end up footing the bill.

But don't get me wrong. In spite of the concerns I have raised here, I am actually in favour of a downtown arena. I think it would bring some much-needed life to an area that is a virtual wasteland, and over time all businesses in the downtown will benefit from having it.

I also think it will help make downtown Edmonton a more interesting place to spend one's time.

However, if members of city council are still confused as to where the dollars the city will have to put up are going to come from and who will pay for any unforeseen costs, how on Earth are people like you and me supposed to decide whether it is a good thing to do?

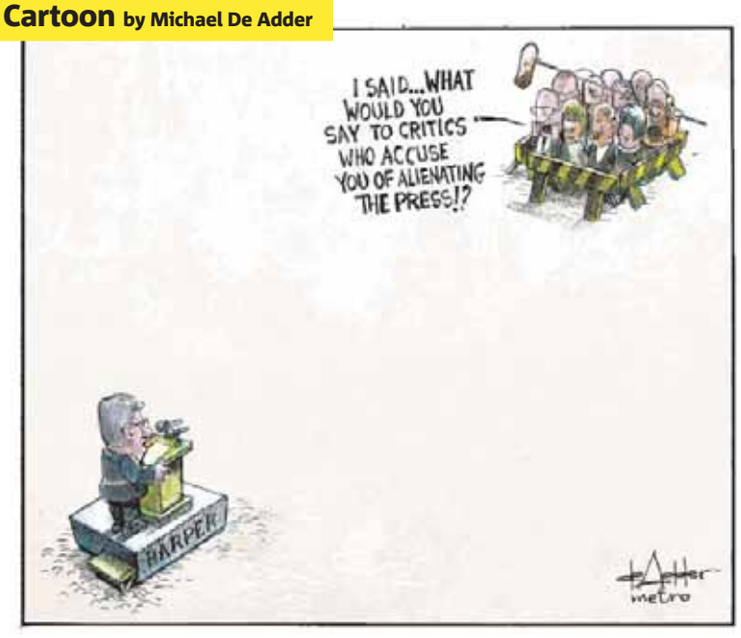

Letters

GATINEAU, Que. By voting or not, young Canadians will decide May 2 whether our country will move towards greater assistance to banks and large corporations or towards a growing economy based on wealth sharing and Canadians' well-being.

An analysis of EKOS polling between July 7 and Sept. 28 of last year suggested Canadians between the ages of 18 and 24 would elect a Liberal minority government, with a substantial increase in representation for the New Democrats, Bloc Québécois and Greens. The Conservative party would be severely reduced, virtually wiped out in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

Unfortunately, only 37 per cent of eligible voters between the ages of 18 and 24 exercised their democratic duty during the 2008 federal election. Let's hope these facts will catch young voters' attention and bring them to the ballots May 2. More than ever, the future of a Canada for all Canadians is in young Canadian voters' hands. BRUNO MARQUIS

Pillows and feathers fly across the globe

People in cities across the globe took part in mass pillow fights as part of International Pillow Fight Day. Pillow fights were held in a number of Canadian cities, including Calgary, Vancouver, Montreal, Toronto and London.

In Vancouver, the flash mob was organized on Facebook and several hundred people showed up with pillows and proceeded to knock the stuffing out of them in a frenzied fight outside the Vancouver Art Gallery.

In London's Trafalgar Square, people came dressed in pyjamas, dressing gowns and fancy clothes to take part in a good-natured pillow fight Saturday afternoon. Most people carried feather-filled pillows that exploded as they fought.

London's Metropolitan Police said yesterday the event had been peaceful and they had no reports of any trouble.

Organizers listed similar events in more than 130 cities around the world. The fights were organized by The Urban Playground Movement, which wants to encourage people to make use of public spaces.

Kids pick their favourites

Johnny Depp showed his appreciation for his Kids' Choice Award with a slimeing.

After earning the blimp-shaped favourite movie actor trophy for his Mad Hatter role in Alice in Wonderland, Depp manned a hose and unleashed waves of green goop on the screaming crowd of more than 10,000 kids — and a few adults.

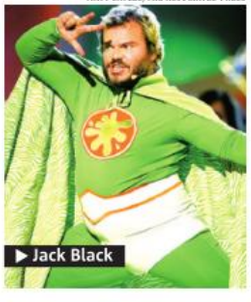

"You guys are the future," he said Saturday before spraying the slime inside University of Southern California's Galen Center. "Take good care of us."

The screaming mob at Nickelodeon's 24th annual fan-favourite ceremony later revolted by flicking the goo at Modern Family co-star Rico Rodriguez and Arthur leading man Russell Brand.

Jack Black, the zany master of ceremonies, kicked off the silly show by arriving in a monster truck, performing a flash mob-style routine on the orange carpet.

Torpedo of Truth tour greeted with boos and calls for it to be ended

Charlie Sheen bombs in tour opener

Charlie Sheen and his "goddesses" took the stage to thunderous applause Saturday night for the first leg of his Torpedo of Truth tour. The 70-minute show hadn't even ended when the first reviews were in, and they were brutal.

The former Two and a Half Men star showed that comedic success on the screen doesn't necessarily translate to the stage, and the capacity crowd at Detroit's 5,100-seat Fox Theatre rebelled before the show ended, chanting "refund!" and walking out in droves.

Linda Fugate, 47, of the Detroit suburb of Lincoln Park, left the theatre and walked up the street yelling, "I want my money back!"

She said she paid $150 for two seats.

"I was hoping for something. I didn't think it would be this bad."

Sheen's publicist Larry Solters declined to comment after the show, but Sheen reappeared after the house lights went up to thank those who remained.

Fans who arrived at the theatre — some who had to fly in for the show — said they were hoping to see the increasingly eccentric actor deliver some of the colourful rants that have made him an Internet star since his ugly falling out with CBS and the producers of Two and a Half Men.

They got the ranting. It just wasn't funny.

"I expected him to at least entertain a little bit. It was just a bunch of ranting," said Rodney Gagnon, 34, of Windsor, Ont.

On Twitter, where Sheen has amassed some 3.4 million followers, some fans were already predicting a premature end for the planned 20-city tour, which was scheduled to resume last night in Chicago.

"Charlie Sheen thanks for saying goodbye! Piece of advice cancel the rest of your tour," someone tweeted under the name ChrstosMo.

The show started well for the 45-year-old Sheen, with the audience standing and cheering as he and the women he calls his "goddesses" took the stage. The women, a former porn star and an actress who live with him, carried placards with the words "War" and "Lock," a reference to Sheen's recent description of himself as a warlock.

"I don't see a single empty seat," he said.

Not long into the show, though, an audience member booed, prompting Sheen to sanguinely reply, "I've already got your money, dude."

Things only got worse.

▶ Spears on a recent morning TV show.

In your new book Cinderella Ate My Daughter, you write about how Disney princess culture has altered your little girl's view of sexuality. It reminded me of Britney Spears, when she debuted in a schoolgirl outfit posing suggestively.

Yes, she set a template for a lot of the confusion that came after and was ironically a direct outgrowth of the Girl Power movement — she had an impact on the way Girl Power was commodified and changed. On the one hand, she was a breakthrough because she was a girl who was a star for girls, as opposed to, say, David Cassidy or Bobby Sherman or the Jonas Brothers today. But as such, she had this whole different approach. She was at once selling chastity and sex and combining them in this really weird way.

And she was doing this for really little girls, when she started.

It's hard to remember now, but one of her central fan bases was six-year-old girls, who would go to her concerts and scream and shout. She always talked about being a virgin. And she'd say, "If you see me as a Lolita, that's your problem." But everything she did completely contradicted that. It's this weird thing where she was sexualizing innocence and fetishizing it. So it was an ultimately incredibly disempowering stance for girls to see.

And what's been the fallout all these years later?

The culture has taken up that message. It plays into the diva culture of little girls right now, that accelerated makeup and hot dance moves, with Miley Cyrus and the like. I want to be clear: I don't come at this from a perspective to be negative about sexuality. It's just that when little girls have inappropriate sexuality — however it's imposed, by pop culture or adults they love — they don't understand it. The risk is that they never connect it and sexiness becomes a performance for them rather than something that involves intimacy. Instead they see sexiness as something they do for the pleasure and entertainment for others. As if self-objectification was a rite of passage.

You see that today: Young girls "sext" naked photos of themselves to their boyfriends.

With sexting, there's also an issue of sexual entitlement. Girls are feeling like they have to perform the idea that they're comfortable with their sexuality. And you have to wonder, what is it that they're getting? They don't have pleasure or control. What is the reality of what that act gives them? It's not anything healthy.

So what are parents supposed to do?

First, it's about limiting their access to media and such, when they're really little. And also trying to expand their ideas of who they are and what they can be, that's not linked constantly to playing at pretty or sassy (which is sexy with training wheels). Educate them and yourself.

Who is your daughter Daisy idolizing these days?

Well, this is going to sound politically correct but it's true. We went to a dinner the other night where this 99-year-old judo champion was being honoured. She was talking about, among other things, how one should be gentle, strong and beautiful. To illustrate "gentle" and "strong," she said she could walk up to a man twice her size (which wouldn't be hard, she was about four-foot-nine) and touch him with her index finger and he would collapse. And by beautiful, she meant not the externals but a beautiful heart. I told Daisy, "Look at her, isn't she amazing!" She was taken. She was into it.

New study

is the amount of time working moms spend looking after their kids in the U.K. per week, according to a new study by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. That includes meals. Stay-at-home moms — and possibly Nanny McPhee? (pictured) — spent twice as much time.

Cooking pork chops with the bone in offers up a juicy and flavourful dish.

And, with just a few other pantry staples, dinner is ready. These pork chops are go perfectly served with rice or mashed potatoes and your favourite vegetables.

Ingredients:

- 4 bone in pork loin chops
- 1/2 tsp (2 mL) each dried sage and thyme leaves
- 1/2 tsp (2 mL) each salt and pepper
- 3 tbsp (45 mL) all purpose flour
- 2 tbsp (25 mL) extra virgin olive oil
- 1 onion, thinly sliced
- 2 apples (such as Empire or Cortland), cored and thinly sliced
- 1 1/2 cups (375 mL) apple cider
- ¼ cup (50 mL) raisins
- 2 tbsp (25 mL) chopped fresh Italian parsley

Preparation:

1. Place pork chops on plate and sprinkle both sides with sage, thyme, salt and pepper. Dredge each pork chop in flour to coat, shake off excess.
2. In large nonstick skillet heat oil over medium high heat and brown pork chops on both sides. Remove to plate and keep warm. Return skillet to medium heat and cook onion for 5 minutes or until softened. Add apples and thyme and cook for 2 minutes. Add cider and raisins and bring to boil. Return pork chops to skillet and turn to coat. Simmer for about 5 minutes or until hint of pink remains inside. Sprinkle with parsley before serving.

Despite waning interest for Earth Hour, experts insist it's still relevant

BEN KNIGHT
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

LUCAS OLENIUK/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ Has Earth Hour run its course?

The fourth annual Earth Hour was observed across Canada last Saturday evening. From 8:30 to 9:30 p.m., lights dimmed in hundreds of communities, as Canadians lent their efforts to a global initiative to reduce power use.

But in Canada at least, the savings were fairly negligible. Toronto saved only half the power of a year ago. Other big cities also showed reduced results, and in Edmonton, electricity consumption actually went up. So, was it a success? Is Earth Hour an idea that's worth pursuing?

"Absolutely, it's a useful exercise," says Stacey McCarthy, communications manager for WWF-Canada in Halifax. "We're very happy that the number of participating cities, municipalities and towns in Canada increased to 422 this year. It was 304 a year ago."

McCarthy insists rising participation — as opposed to kilowatt-hours saved — is the better measure of Earth Hour's effectiveness.

"The one hour is a symbolic demonstration more than an effort to save power," she says. "We just want to see awareness increasing, and that's what did happen. Earth Hour is becoming a common household term. It's exciting to see Canadians click in and say 'I need to do something about this.'"

Jennifer Link, spokesperson for Toronto Hydro, agrees.

"Generally, conservation is a year-round activity," she says. "This is an awareness-raising tactic to get people excited about conservation. Why wouldn't you do it? It generates interest, and gets people thinking about conservation for the longer term."

Earth Hour

Dimming the lights:

- In your city The city's power consumption increased during the lights-out period last Saturday – possibly because the Edmonton Oilers were playing at home against the Calgary Flames, lighting up Rexall Place and televisions across the province.
- In Calgary Alberta has traditionally been reluctant to embrace Earth Hour. Calgary saw a slight decrease this year but utility officials downplayed the consumption drop.

HELP WITH ECO-HYGIENE

I have three daughters, which has me wondering about the greenest alternatives when it comes to feminine hygiene products. Can you help? Sherry of Montreal

The two main considerations when buying the greenest feminine hygiene products are materials and waste.

The average woman will go through about 11,500 tampons in her lifetime. So the least wasteful option is to switch to a reusable menstrual cup. These are made from natural latex rubber or silicone and can be used for up to a decade. Before you decide that this is a bit out of your comfort zone, consider that a reusable mini cup works for heavy or light flow, doesn't leak, comes in different sizes and only needs to be emptied two to four times a day.

How gazing out the window changed one man's career

A moment of entrepreneurial inspiration can strike anywhere. For Alex Stuart, it was while looking out the window of his condominium at the roofs of the Winnipeg Skyline.

"Look at all that unused real estate," Alex thought to himself, as he came up with an idea to harness its space and energy. "I started researching wind turbines and came across the vertical axis design. I fell in love the simplicity of the model."

Stuart and his business partner Justin Phillips at Global Wind Group are now marketing their technology to India, several countries in the Caribbean and Canada's Northern Territories where electricity is expensive and difficult to maintain.

It also hasn't been plagued with the problems facing the large scale turbines because of its compact, vertical design and minimal noise.

"Some entrepreneurs will sell at this stage, recoup the money and go on. We're really motivated to keep this going and stay in the business."

Are you thinking about starting your own business but are in need of some inspiration?

Follow Alex Stuart's lead. Sometimes all it takes is opening your eyes and looking out the window.

Business advice

1. Do your market research — it's critical
2. Find qualified mentors
3. Seek investment well before you run out of money
4. Be prepared for bankruptcy

ROBERT KANIA
TALENTEGG.CA

It was March of 2005, and I was on the verge of finishing an undergraduate degree in English at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont.

I was also working full-time in a managerial capacity at a bar and nightclub on campus. I generally don't take on a job or project unless I'm prepared to pour my heart and soul into it.

I was lucky to be aligned with others that operated the same way, in my role as manager of food operations at the Queen's Pub and Alfie's Pub on campus. Our team achieved exceptional results, and we ultimately went on to turn around two struggling campus operations.

One night in the spring of 2005, after months of hard work, I received an unexpected voicemail message from the food service rep that I dealt with. This individual worked for SYSCO Food Services and he mentioned that his company was interested in hiring an ambitious grad.

That voicemail message ultimately led me to apply for a position in sales and marketing for SYSCO Food Services. I was accepted for the role and I moved from my hometown of Toronto to beautiful Victoria, B.C.

Where Robert is now

After working with SYSCO for two years on the West Coast, I started my own venture distributing natural health products. In 2008, I decided to return to school for an MBA at the University of Victoria.

Canadians start off at top of heap

Winnipeg rink's three games on weekend draw near-capacity crowds at Regina's Brandt Centre

Canada's Jeff Stoughton picked up his third straight win to open the Ford Men's World Curling Championship yesterday despite German skip Andy Kapp's one-man show.

Stoughton's Winnipeg team shot 90 per cent to Germany's 71 in a 7-4 victory, but Kapp compensated for his teammates' mistakes with some pressure shots to keep the game close.

"We have to give credit to Andy Kapp because that could have been a blowout for sure," said Stoughton third Jon Mead.

Canada scored two points in the third and seventh ends with last-rock advantage and stole one in the tenth, while Germany couldn't muster a multi-point end when they had the hammer.

Kapp drew for a piece of the button surrounded by three Canadian stones in the fourth end to tie the game 2-2. The German skip faced four Canadian counters in the sixth and again drew in for one to make it 3-3.

"Andy Kapp was a one-man wrecking crew. At times it felt like seven against one out there."
STOUGHTON THIRD JON MEAD ON GERMAN SKIP ANDY KAPP

"It's good to know we've got the game to hold off a hot skip and make some great shots ourselves," Stoughton said.

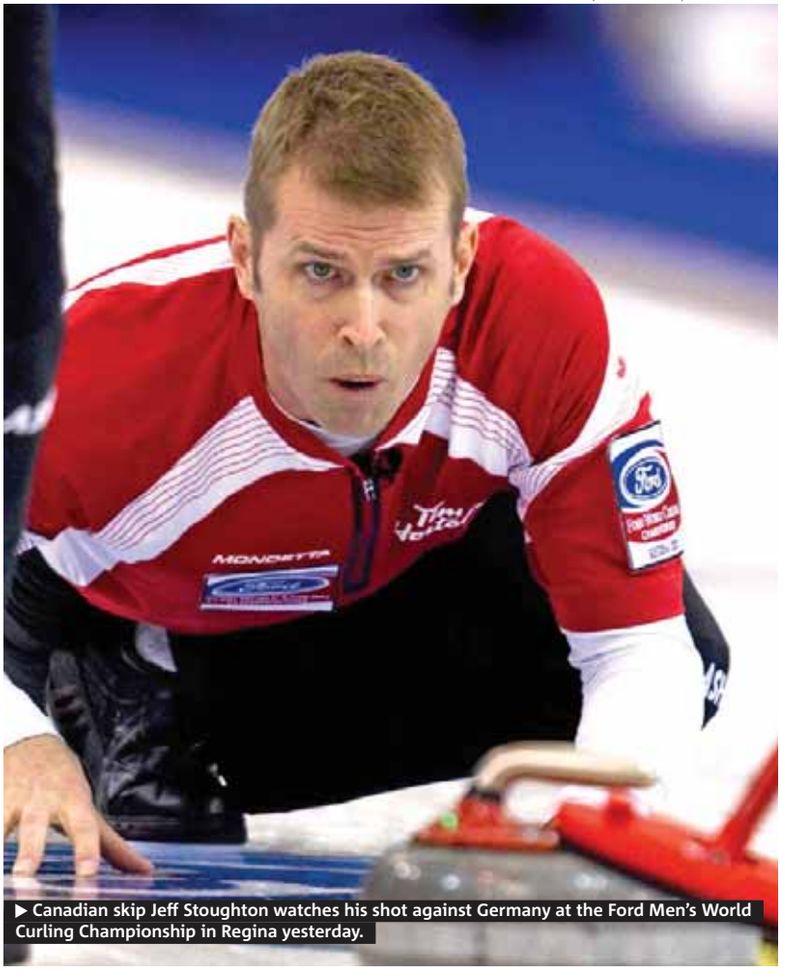

Stoughton's front end of second Reid Carruthers and lead Steve Gould dominated German counterparts Andreas Lang and Holger Hoehne with shooting percentages about 20 per cent higher.

"I had to make some circus shots to keep us alive, but it was not enough to win this game," Kapp said. "We needed to make more shots to put pressure on them, but we were under pressure the whole game."

Kapp is appearing in his 13th world championship and has the most career wins at 66. He has yet to collect one here as his team dropped to 0-2.
